HITLER MAY RULE GERMANY WITH NAZI-SOCIALIST COALITION

DISARMAMENT IS A MEASURE OF SECURITY

British Policy Would Ensure Peace.

FAVOURABLE PRESS COMMENT
IN LONDON.

London, To-day.

The English Press generally, features Britain's disarmament proposals.

The Times says: "They must concentrate on the immediate condition to gain a successful advance which will give Germany no excuse for remaining outside the Conference."

The Daily Telegraph points out that the British policy is guided throughout by the principle of disarmament which itself is a measure of security, while the French plan stresses that the organisation of security does not touch the actual reduction of armaments.

The New Chronicle observes the conspicuous omission of the refusal to consider the abolition of big battleships.

The Daily Herald, Labour journal, says they have taken a "big step forward," but asks that the one-third reduction of air forces be equally applied to armies and fleets.—Reuter.

BRITISH PLAN FOR ARMS CUTS TOLD TO WORLD

No Further Reduction
Without Agreement.

GRANTS GERMAN EQUALITY.

London, To-day.

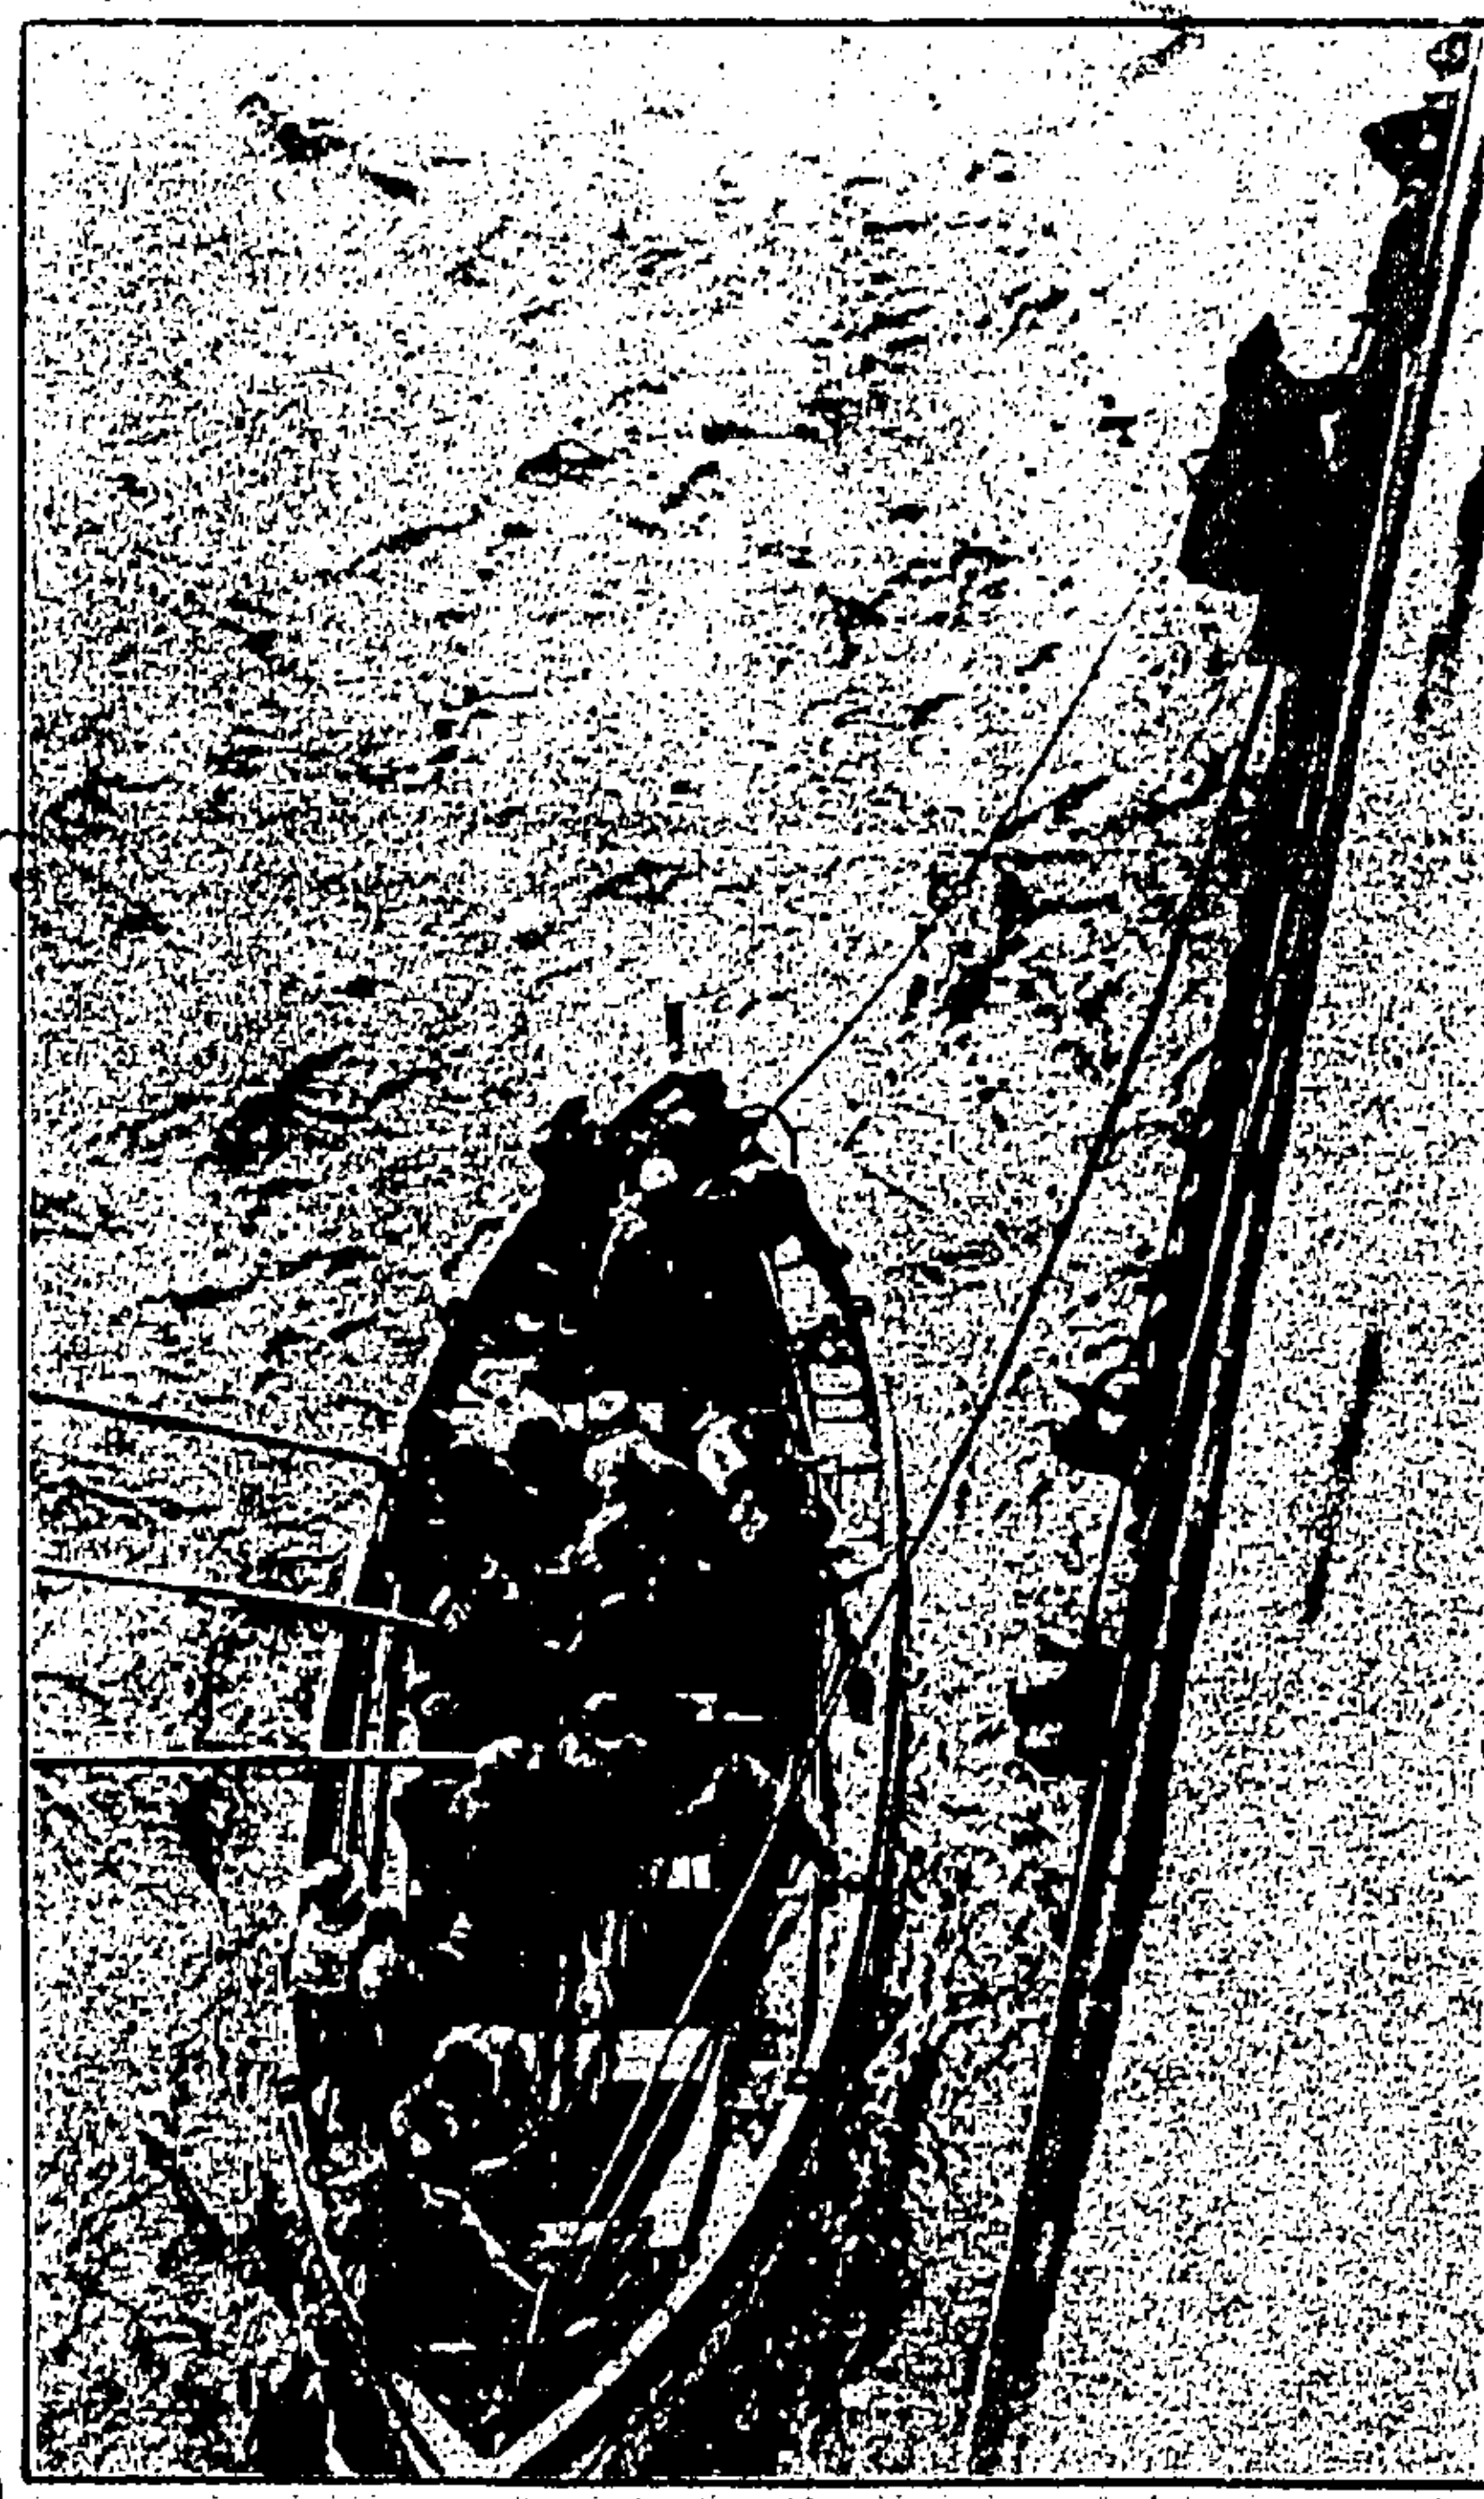

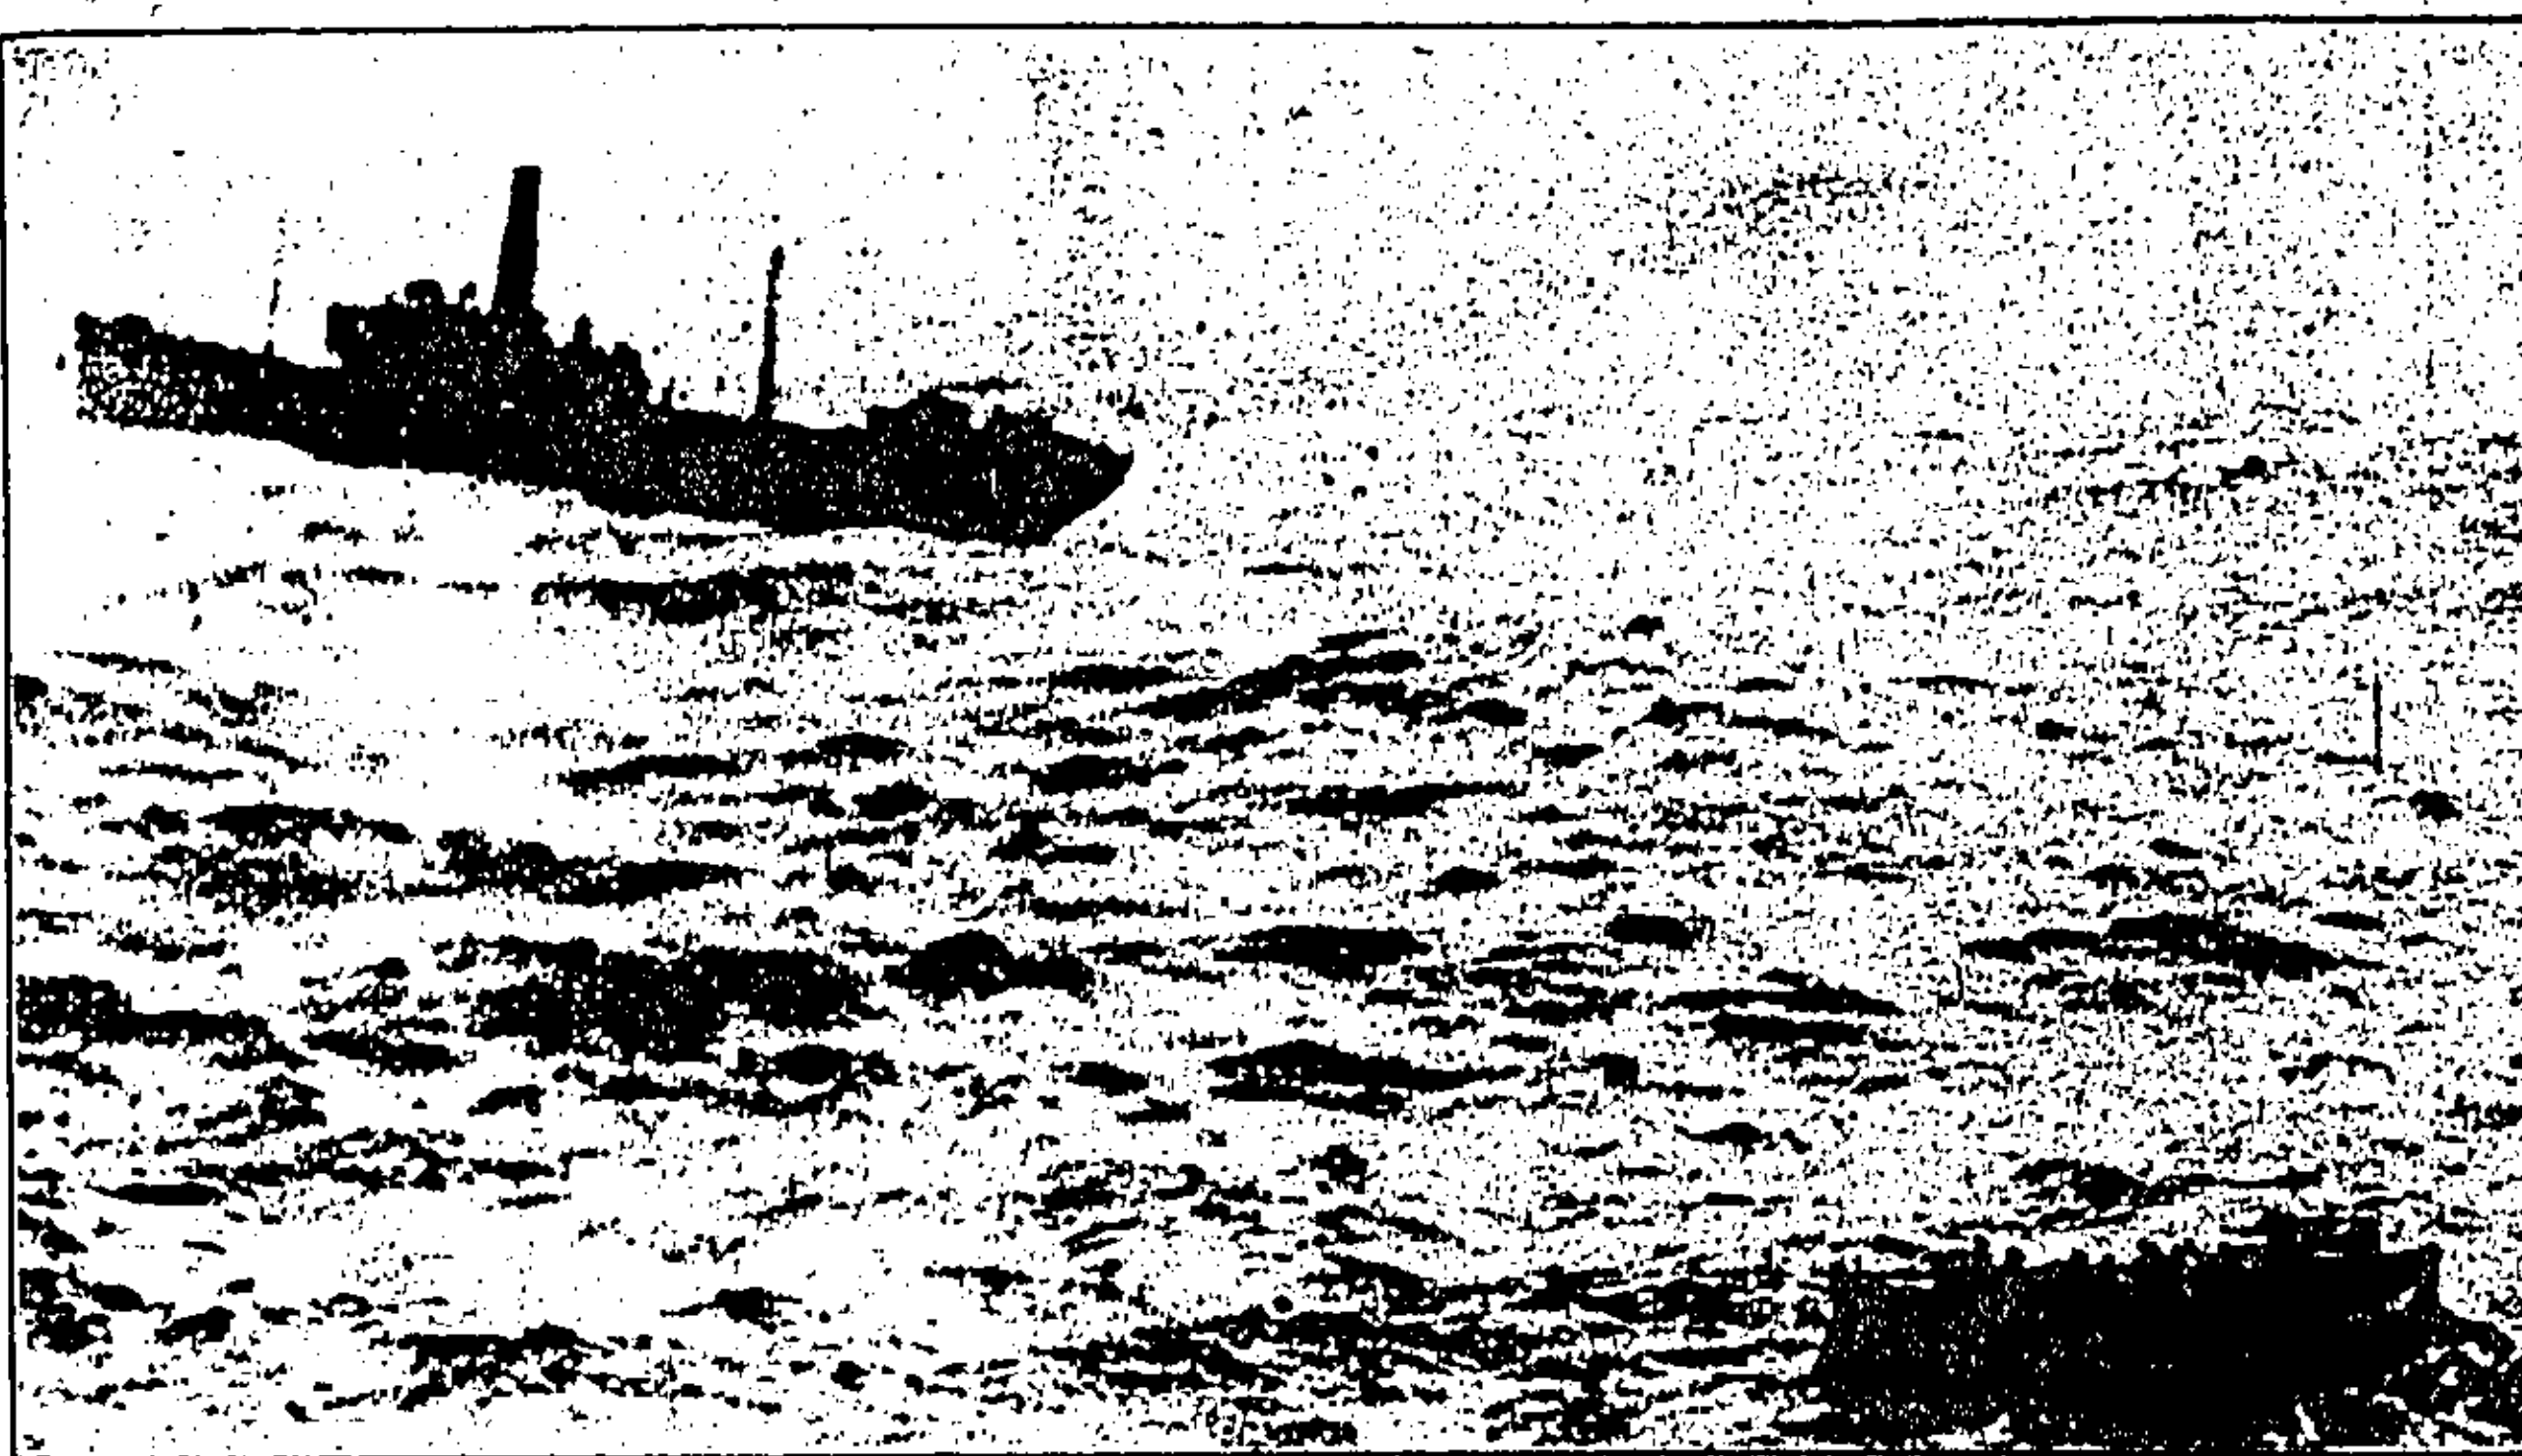

The feature of the British disarmament proposals presented at Geneva by Sir John Simon yesterday and which has attracted the most attention, is the suggestion for the immediate and drastic reduction of air force as a first stage to their total elimination.

In considering the proposal that countries, including Great Britain, which possess large air armaments should reduce them to two-thirds of the present size of the British air force, it should be remembered that although Britain now stands only fifth in size among the world air powers she did possess at the end of the war largest and most powerful air force in the world, which she has since reduced unilaterally.

Further immediate measures are proposed in the limitation of unladen weight of military aircraft to the lowest figure generally agreed to. Britain declares herself willing to go with other powers to any length to preserve the civilian population from the fearful horrors of an air bombardment so vividly described by Mr. Stanley Baldwin in his striking speech last week.

Examination with the other chief air powers of measures for effective international control of civil aviation is the essential feature of proposals for attainment of this end. Pending examination of these proposals it is considered not unreasonable to expect Germany to withhold any claim to possess military aircraft. Regarding land armaments, the limitation of mobile guns to 105 millimeter (Germany's limit as prescribed by treaty) and abolition of tanks above a given weight, fixed to exclude those suitable for offensive operations, are most striking features.

KING'S OPTIMISTIC SPEECH AT PROROGATION.

Successful British Policy in Iraq Gratifying.

London, To-day.

When Parliament prorogued yesterday the Lord Chancellor read the King's speech which touched on the main events of a very busy session. Admission of Iraq to membership of the League of Nations as an independent state was referred to as a successful issue of the policy pursued by the British Government during last 12 years. The settlement of the German reparations question at Lausanne was described as an essential preliminary to the economic recovery of the world.

Hope was expressed that trade negotiations now proceeding with foreign countries would lead to a mutually satisfactory arrangement. Agriculture and town planning were also among subjects dealt with in speech.—British Wireless Service.

DOLLAR RISES AS SILVER ADVANCES.

Pound Weakens.

After remaining at 1/4% throughout the week, the local dollar recovered to 1/4% this morning, following the recovery of silver.

Spot silver advanced 1/8% to 18 1/2%, while the forward price was quoted at 18 3/16, showing a rise of 1/16.

The pound weakened yesterday, the London on New York cross rate being quoted at £-G$3.28% this morning, as against £-G$3.31% yesterday, while the New York on London rate, quoted yesterday at £-G$3.31% stood at £-G$3.29% this morning.

Irish Cheer The Prince Speech From Top Of A Six-Foot Wall.

Belfast, To-day.

The Prince of Wales spent most of the day visiting some of the leading industries in Northern Ireland. He was the centre of a scene of immense enthusiasm at night when, after dining with his host, the Duke of Abercorn, Governor of Northern Ireland, he unexpectedly appeared unannounced in the neighbouring village of Hillsborough where his visit was being celebrated by crowds of country folk.

He was almost overwhelmed by exuberant friendliness and at the request of the crowds he clambered to the top of a six-foot wall from which he made a speech.—British Wireless Service.

ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE.

Premier Presides Over
Meeting.

A NEW CONSTITUTION.

London, To-day.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, yesterday presided over the preliminary meeting of the third Indian Round Table Conference which met at the House of Lords to fix the agenda.

The Premier in extending a greeting to the delegates said that everything the British Government could do to contribute to the success of the work would be done without stint. The Aga Khan, on behalf of the Indian delegates, (Continued on Page 12.)

IRISH FREE STATE'S GOVERNOR.

To Be Appointed
Soon.

MINISTER IN LONDON.

Dublin, To-day.

Strong rumours are current that Mr. Joseph P. Walshe, of the Free State Department of External Affairs, is at present in London to present the name of the new Governor-General of the Irish Free State to the King for royal assent.

The rumour is strengthened by the fact that the Appropriation Bill, now before the Free State Senate, must be signed by the King's representative in the Irish Free State when all stages of the bill have passed. The bill must become law before November 25.—Reuter.

NANKING'S STAND DEFENDED

Moderation In Case Of
C.M.S.N. Co.

Shanghai, To-day.

The Chinese Government has issued a full statement regarding the negotiations between the China Merchants and the China Realty Companies.

A responsible Government official declares that the recent criticisms against the Government were made without full knowledge of the case. The Government, he states, has acted with great restraint and moderation, particularly in its treatment of Li Kuo-chieh.

The Government objected to the alleged agreements because they were made without the knowledge of the Government or the shareholders. No report was submitted to the Government till more than two months had elapsed. The insinuation that the Government employed force to take back the wharves is untrue.

It is pointed out that the recent $80,000,000 loan had been approved by the Executive Yuan, yet the China Merchants' agreement, covering $30,000,000 and disposing of important properties for thirty years, was not submitted to the Government for confirmation.—Reuter.

SIR SAMUEL WILSON COMING HERE.

High Colonial Official
To Visit Hong Kong.

The Government has been informed that Brigadier-General Sir Samuel M. Wilson, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., K.B.E., Permanent Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, hopes to pay a short visit to Hong Kong from December 15 to 21 next.

Sir Samuel Wilson will be accompanied by Lady Wilson and by Mr. G. E. J. Gent, D.S.O., M.C., of the Colonial Office.

EXTRADITION WARRANT FOR SAMUEL INSULL.

Millionaire Fugitive Still Residing In Greece.

Washington, To-day.

A warrant for the extradition of Mr. Samuel Insull, millionaire promoter of the huge Insull enterprises, which were recently shown to be financially unsound, has been signed here and will go forward immediately to the American legation in Athens.

Mr. Insull, once an associate of the late Mr. Thomas A. Edison, famous inventor, was for years looked upon as one of the twelve wealthiest men in America.—Reuter.

THREE INDIANS SENTENCED FOR ARMED ATTACK

Attempted To Murder
Sir Alfred Watson.

"LIFE TRANSPORTATION."

Calcutta, To-day.

Sunil Chatterji, 23, was today sentenced to transportation for life for conspiring in the attempted murder of Sir Alfred Watson, editor of the Statesman, on last September 28. Another Bengali Hindu was sentenced to ten years' rigorous imprisonment, while a third man was sentenced to five years.

All three were arrested soon after the shooting occurred.

Sir Alfred Watson, his secretary, Mrs. Rose Grose and his chauffeur, all were wounded, the latter seriously, by gunfire from the terrorists, while they were driving.

The attempt at the assassination of Sir Alfred Watson was carefully planned by the terrorists and occurred at 6 o'clock while he was motoring. Another motor dashed up and poured a hail of bullets into Sir Alfred's car, wounding him in both shoulders.

The driver was wounded seriously and Mrs. Grose slightly.

The assailants drove off at terrific speed. It was not long before police were following the fugitive car and within a little time the three occupants abandoned the machine and attempted to elude pursuit afoot.

Police were too close, and closed in upon them. Two of them swallowed poison and the third, in the confusion of a crowded street, escaped in a taxicab.

Crowds, as well as police, chased the three gunmen.

All the assailants were young Bengali men.

On August 5 an assassin shot at Sir Alfred but missed, and immediately afterwards swallowed poison and died on the spot.

"AMY" HELD UP

Forced Landing At Benguella.

London, To-day.

Bad luck has overtaken Miss Amy Johnson's (Mrs. J. A. Mollison) effort to establish a fresh record for the England-South Africa flight.

Having flown 4,700 miles by the morning of the fourth day, a considerable distance ahead of the time established by her husband, Mr. J. A. Mollison during his record flight—she was yesterday morning forced to land through an oil pressure defect at Benguella, Portuguese East Africa, 1,700 miles from Cape Town.

It is expected that she will continue in a few hours if repairs are possible, but her chances of breaking the record are now slight.—British Wireless Service.

VON PAPEN'S GOVERNMENT SURRENDERS

Hindenburg Accepts
Its Resignation.

A WASTED ELECTION.

Berlin, To-day.

President von Hindenburg has accepted the resignation of Herr von Papen's Government.

The Government's position was made impossible by the action of the Socialist party, which, because of its quarrel with Herr von Papen, joined with its Nazi enemies in order to drive the Chancellor out of office.

The recent German election did not change the political situation in the least, except that it shuffled the representation of the parties in the Reich. Herr von Papen was without a majority. There was no possible way for him to carry on the Government unless he could obtain support from one of the other large parties. The union of Nazis and Socialists gave them the bulk of votes in the Reichstag and it was only a matter of time before the Government must be defeated. Chancellor von Papen resigned before the session of the Reich was called.

The Government made its decision yesterday after a secret meeting.

HINDENBURG CALLS LEADERS' PARLEY.

Hitler Probably Will Not Attend.

Munich, To-day.

Herr Adolf Hitler's headquarters state he will probably not participate in the conference which President Hindenburg has called for party leaders on Saturday.

He is standing by his declaration that the Nazis must head the Government or remain outside it and is prepared to bide his time to obtain full control.—Reuter.

The division of the parties in the Reichstag now is as follows: Nazis 195 Socialists 121 Communists 100 People's Party 82 German People's Party 11 Centre 70 Bavarians 18 Others 10 The total of deputies is 532.

No Party Government.

Berlin, Nov. 12.

President von Hindenburg is firmly resolved to see the present "Presidential" government continue in office for quite some time and not to allow an early return to the former system of party government. It was authoritatively stated today following the Chancellor's reception by the Reich president to whom Herr von Papen reported on the Cabinet's views concerning the political situation created by the outcome of last.

Melbourne, To-day.

D. R. Jardine was again successful with the spin of the coin and the M.C.C. scored 56 for the loss of R. E. S. Wyatt against an Australian XI on a good wicket before lunch.

Paris Silhouettes Every Type Waistlines, Hips And Hems Reviewed VARIED DECOLLETES

There are a number of very interesting outlines in the new Paris
mode for evening; and, indeed,
there is a silhouette for almost every type of figure.

Skirt fullness, starting high on the hips and accentuating the front emphasis so notable this season, is very good for both the too plump and the too slender. Chanel is doing a good deal with the high full treatment; often she makes it quite voluminous; but the change in point of concentration gives an effect that differs entirely from her bouffant skirts of other seasons. She is also fond of jabotfurnished and apron draperies that produce the illusion of a tunic,
though she has few real tunics
for evening.

Velvet corselets, often contrasting with the rest of the frock in colour as well as texture, are an amusing and typical evening feature chez Long, Chanel and others. They solve the waistline problem for a great many women.
Chanel's are modish and Long's semi-fitted, in which case they have an even better chance of finding a becoming line.

Tunics For All Shapes.
The short Greek evening tunic,
though less wholeheartedly hailed
by the buyers than the longer variety, is really not difficult to really not difficult to wear; a nice sense of proportion is needed to select just the right length, it is true; but, once that point is decided, the effect is extraordinarily chic. Mainbocher's slim gored or pleated models add inches to one's height and are delightful on slender figures.

Molynaux's short flared tunics, on the other hand, will disguise fullness in the hips and they are also becoming to the willow-wand type.
Leading couturiers report that the shorter tunics please their exclusive private clients, which means that they are something to remember and watch for in the future.

Those who prophesied the passing of the molded evening hip-line reckoned without the allure of Spain. The so-called "Spanish Princess" silhouette turns out to be an important evening style-note.
As it is done to-day however, it reminds one more of the Empire and the Directoire period than of the poured-in princess favoured by popular Spanish dancers; for the long fitted line, often tight to the knees, with some sort of flounce to kick out around the feet, is usually broken at a high waistline with a fitted bodice. Lucile Paray and Mainbocher are the two principal partisans of this mode, which also has numerous lesser devotees.

Fur Trimmings.

Fur trimmings, which tend to detach themselves from our wraps, are becoming attached to our evening gowns. Bands of fox or sable edge tunics or peplums. Short fur sleeves are favourites everywhere.
Lucile Paray's tur-ficu bodices are paradoxically chic. She makes them of mink or sables, crossed in front or back (or both) and they form little justing sleeves, but leave the back almost bare.

Decolletes are just as varied as outlines. There are high backs and low fronts; square or U fronts
and backs; there are various combinations of the square and the circle; there are star-shaped and heart-shaped decolletages, and there are new kinds of strappings,
more often used to suspend drop-shouldered puff sleeves than to form either back or front of the corset.

New Evening Jacket.

We have had so many of them
that it seemed impossible to invent
a new kind of indoor evening jacket; but Mainbocher has done it in looped ribbon affairs that are as delightful as they are indescribable. They are something between a cape and a jacket (a jacket without armholes might explain them).
He makes them of wide peau d'ange or velvet ribbon in vivid blue or azalea shades to wear with black crepe frocks, that may or may not be trimmed with echoing touches of the ribbon.

There is, by the way, so much velvet shown that it is a relief to find a number of good crepe evening gowns chez Mainbocher and to see Lucile Paray featuring shining satin or peau d'ange, even when trimmed with velvet ribbon tops, looped sleeves and so on.

The new evening capes seem to thrill almost everybody—capes and romance have always been affinities. Perhaps the most exciting of all the new evening wraps are Worth's long, full, domino-like capes of supple velvet. In some versions a shirred contrasting yoke represents the absent capuchon; in others the effect is achieved by drapery.

FRUIT TEMPTING FOR BREAKFAST.

Variety Of Fashions In Bananas.

Fruit breakfasts are eaten in most homes nowadays, and housewives who find them difficult to vary should serve melons and bananas besides the more acid fruits.

The bananas may be baked and served with cream, and followed by rissoles made from tomatoes,
onions, cheese and breadcrumbs,
bound together with beaten eggs.

Bananas sliced and served on boiled rice, with fried eggs are tasty and nourishing. An other variation is provided by sectioning
and skinning a number of oranges.
With these crisp waffles are eaten.

Or the fruit breakfast might consist largely of a salad of onions,
apples, raisins, bananas and nuts.

launched last Winter, proved incompatible with modern steam-heating; though the practicality of the wool idea, appealed to everybody; so, this Winter, the Paris couturiers are going in for what Jean Patou calls "hefty coats of thick wool accompanied by very thin, often transparent, wool frocks. These play an important part in the new afternoon mode and they are liked for their smartly unostentatious character.

SCIENCE IN SAUCEPAN.

Saucepans which show you the measure of their contents may suggest that cookery is becoming too much of a science, yet these are undoubtedly a great help in a busy kitchen. Not only do they save time—but they save cleaning too.
You can, for example, measure the milk, for the custard in the pan in which it is to be boiled, the side of the aluminium saucepan being very clearly marked from a ¼ pint
to two pints.
There is a smaller pan, if the two-pint size is thought too large.

TALKIE TALKS

by
Diane"DOOMED BATTALION" A GREAT SUCCESS*MARION NIXON'S CHARM IN PLAY AT KING'S.*"Viennese Nights" Due At The Queen's.

"The Doomed Battalion" presents an unexploited phase of the World War, the fighting on the Austro-Italian frontier. We have magnificent views of the Austrian Tyrol blended expertly with Universal Studio scenes. Here is where the Director, Cyril Gardner, is to be congratulated for his assembling of the production.

Luis Trenker, the famous skier and climber, was born in the village which is the scene of the story he wrote. He directed the Alpine scenes in the real surroundings, and is a rugged, pleasing, personally who acts naturally. Tala Birell has little to do. Her natural beauty could be improved with a better make-up. This Rumanian actress has possibilities and is a different type. Victor Varconi is far too seldom seen, but he pleases always.

In the story which is slow-moving at times, we have Austrian soldiers ordered to hold a certain position at any cost. Truth is stranger than fiction, as Luis Trenker, took part in just such a real life story, during the war, and actually commanded the band of men on Mount Lagazuol when the Italians were mining underneath. They held it for twenty-two days, and a few escaped when it was blown to smithereens. There is no love triangle. The Italian Officer does not steal the wife while her husband is away on duty. You will see Henry Gordon, Von Seyffert, Albert Conti, and Henry Armetta in minor roles.

A false note is struck when some of the players speak with harsh American accents. The suspense is too drawn-out at the finish, but still one feels gratified that "Florian" reaches the battalion in the nick of time. This is a picture I highly recommend as it is refreshingly uncommon. The camera comes into its own, the acting is good, quite a few thrills and there is no peace-at-any-price propaganda. Highly recommended. (Central).

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

You may think "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" old-fashioned, but you will be forced to admit its charm, and that it is a treat to see up much of the entertainment you an innocent sweet young heroine, most sincerely and capably played by Marion Nixon. I am glad to say that Ralph Bellamy, a favourite of mine, is more than holding his own. Louise Closser Hale, and Mae Marsh are especially good. Mary Pickford will be remembered in the silent version.

An impoverished mother sends the eldest of her family to visit a rich aunt. She melts that iceberg, and is tireless in improving the outlook of everyone she meets. After seeing this little Pollyanna, you leave the theatre thinking the world is not such a bad place after all, and the simple philosophy is sound.

Marion Nixon as a girl—(she is now about twenty-six) used to work in a store. She was making a name for herself in the movies, when she married a pugilist, and that was most unhappy. Then along came the son of a millionaire Chicago Department store owner. Marion retired after marriage. Now, after Commandments." Herein, we will glimpse at some of the scenes from the Cecil de Mille production of "Ten Commandments." I am keen to see the little girl, Patricia Detering-Nathan with whom I had tea in her nursery many years ago in Tientsin. Her father, Major Nathan is head of the Kailan Administration Co. This is followed by John Mack Brown in "The Vanishing Frontier." (King's).

"Young Donovan's Kid."

In "Young Donovan's Kid" you are likely to cry and not feel ashamed Richard Dix is the star, but the youngster, Jackie Cooper steals the picture. Gang leader straightens out life in order to set good example to boy who idolises him. Weepest scenes come in Court-room scene, when the Judge decides the gangster is not a fit guardian for boy. Cast is satisfactory, and Jackie Cooper worth the visit. (Queen's).

"Happy Ending."

Jan Hay's thriller "Happy Ending" with George Barrard, remembered in "Last of Mrs. Cheyne", Benita Hume, liked in "Service for Ladies", Anne Grey, and a new Cockney comedian Alf Goddard, we have a cast that ensures an enjoyable evening. The action of the play takes place in 1912, and the fashions are almost amusing. The Cunard Liner "Albatross" was used for the thrilling shipwreck scene. It is a story of human sacrifice, but the title rather gives the show away. (Queen's).

Central's Attractions.

"Scandal for Sale." Newspaper Editor seeks new fields in order that he may have a free hand in printing news, and—there is plenty of comedy, pleasant music and a delightful touch of romance. This is Charles Bickford's picture, but Pat O'Brien and Rose Hobart lend grand support. "Born to Love" with a plot that died of old-age years ago, but Constance Bennett, Joel McCrea and Paul Cavanagh make it of interest. The two W's, Wheeler and Woolsey in "Peach O'Reno," then one long scream "Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood," followed by the British laugh riot, "Thark," in which we have the old favourites together, Tom Walls and Ralph Lynn. All due at the Central.

"Viennese Nights."

"Viennese Nights" ranks among the best operettas yet produced, and vied with "Love Parades" for success in Singapore. Vivienne Segal

"Life Goes On."

Hugh Wakefield, Betty Stockfield, Elsie Randolph, Warwick Ward and Wallace Geoffreys in the Paramount British release, "Life Goes On." Based on the play by Walter Hackett. "Sorry you've been troubled." Heroine is the operator on the switchboard in a famous London Hotel. Ridgway Emsworth an explorer. We have comedy, drama, intrigue and mystery crammed into life in a huge hotel. What would happen if a telephone operator told all she knew?—This question sums up much of the entertainment you will find in this excellently produced film, directed by an old Movie hand, Jack Raymond. (King's).

Star Attractions.

Don't forget "Disraeli"—A wonderful film with Mr. and Mrs. George Arliss, Joan Bennett, Doris Lloyd, Anthony Bushell and a large cast. Followed by the famous German clown "Grock." This is good only when he does his vaudeville act, but worth seeing once. Followed by one day of the British thriller "The Ghost Train" then a first-run showing of "Brown Sugar." Years ago it was played by a visiting Company at the old City Hall. Allan Ayresworth, Francis Lister, Constance Carpenter and Eva Moore will make this interesting. All due at the Star.

HOLLYWOOD NOTES.

Talks from Here and There.

Lionel Barrymore will be in the Radio film, "Sweepings," Reginald Denny, Marian Marsh and Irving Pichel in "All the Evidence." One certainly loses sight of the home-studio of the different stars, they are "out" so much.

Phillips Holmes not being pleased with Paramount's refusal to raise his salary, has signed to M.G.M. at the figure wanted.

Barthelmess will be seen in the first film of commercial Air traffic. "Good Earth" made into a stage play is a riot with Nazimova in the chief part.

Remember Herbert Rawlinson, the Britisher, who was so liked in the movies?—Now in the present Broadway success, "When Ladies Meet." This has received one hundred percent notices.

"Wedding Rehearsal" with Roland Young and George Grossmith ideal cast and Korda directing a la Lubitch is highly praised by critics in the United States, and the English press.

A new star Boots Mallory will be seen with James Dunn in "Walking Down Broadway" directed by van Stroheim.

Cary Grant, leading at Paramount used to be a vaudeville turn, which consisted of walking on stilts in a comedy trio.

The Fredric March's (Florence Eldridge) will be seen in the Radio picture "Thirteen Women."

GIRL WHO RAN AWAY FROM HOLLYWOOD.Now In England Wishing She Had Not Done It.

London

Camille Horn thinks she was a very silly girl three years ago. She left America, then, and went home to Germany. Now she wishes she hadn't.

Remember, Camille? She was with John Barrymore in "The Tempest" and "Eternal Love" both silent, and when the talkies came and nobody knew what was going to happen to the industry, Camille got scared and excited and ran off home to Berlin.

"Oh, I was a silly girl," Camille pouts now. "My contract still had six months to go. I should have stayed. And I would be somebody big to-day, I know."

Camille was homesick in Hollywood, but she loved it, too, and now she's hoping she'll get another chance. One company recently took screen tests of her here.

"I sometimes wonder if I ever will go back," she mused.

Back in Germany Camille has been playing in German pictures, and is now making "Raffles," an English picture. She has only the tiniest accent, and if her English has rusted a bit, her beauty hasn't.

Big brown eyes, golden hair, little teeth and fine-cut features, she is still in her 20s.

She went into the movies as an extra—she needed the money. But the movie people saw her pretty legs, photographed them to double for those of a famous dancing star who had big feet. Out of all that Camille got launched on her career.

Now she thinks she is kind of starting over again.—Associated Press.

WHERE BAD REPORTERS GO—HOLLYWOOD.

Hollywood.

John Weld, former "stunt man" and newspaper reporter, will prepare the scenario for "The Double," a feature about the life of a "stunt" player in Hollywood which Columbia will produce.

Much of Weld's own experience as a stunt man for three years will be incorporated. His own life would make an exciting film for besides being a double taking his neck daily, he was a reporter for many years and has two published books to his credit, as well as a play which will be produced on Broadway this autumn. For the last two years Weld has been star reporter on the Paris edition of the New York "Herald Tribune."

ROUND HONG KONG'S CINEMA THEATRES

MAIL REVIEW

"HAPPY ENDING"—QUEEN'S THEATRE.

Jan Hay's play "Happy Ending" has been adapted to the screen and directed by Millard Webb, and is the current attraction at the Queen's Theatre. The main interest of the thrilling story is focused on Denis Craddock, the weak philanderer, who his only daughter is brought up by her mother to believe, died an heroic death in the wreck of a liner.

George Barrard in the role of Craddock is admirable, and is at his best when he becomes an uninvited guest to his daughter's birthday party. This scene is brilliantly enacted with Daphne Courtenay, as the girl.

As the wife, Anne Grey is good, while Benita Hume and Alf Goddard, both render splendid support. Recommended!

MAIL REVIEW

"PALMY DAYS"—KING'S THEATRE.

In response to requests by theatre-goers, Samuel Goldwyn's popular musical film "Palmy Days" is showing again at the King's Theatre. Eddie Cantor has the leading role in this production, which is just one big laugh from beginning to end. Charlotte Greenwood, Eleanor Hunt, Barbara Weeks and Frances Dee help a great deal in making the film the marked success that it is. Recommended!

MAIL REVIEW

"CONGORILLA"—MAJESTIC THEATRE.

"Congorilla" now showing at the Majestic Theatre, is both travelogue and jungle drama. Yet it is more engaging than most examples of either type. It is, in brief, a talking picture record of an expedition by the Martin Johnsons into Central Africa.

MAIL REVIEW

"CAUGHT PLASTERED"—CENTRAL THEATRE.

That inimitable pair, Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler, who learned that two can be more successful than one are shown back together again in "Caught Plastered," showing at the Central Theatre again to-day by special request. That it is a farce goes without saying, and of the most idiotic type.

In "Caught Plastered" they are ably assisted by their feminine third to the trio, Dorothy Lee. "I'm That Way About You," is sung by Wheeler and Miss Lee.

MAIL REVIEW

"DISRAELI"—STAR THEATRE.

George Arliss, the famous English actor, does his best work to date in "Disraeli" now playing at the Star Theatre. As the famous statesman who feared nothing and defied all, Arliss gives a memorable portrayal. He is well supported by Anthony Bushell, Mrs. Arliss and Joan Bennett, as the daughter. Highly recommended! It is certainly worth seeing again!

CHINESE CONSTABLE CHARGED.

In Possession Of Illicit Opium.

In consequence of investigations, a Chinese constable, Lau King, appeared before Mr. Schofield in the Central Police Court this morning, charged with the unlawful possession of 11 taels of opium.

The case was adjourned until tomorrow morning when evidence for the prosecution will be heard. Both the constable and a second defendant, were granted bail in the sum of $1,000.

SICK HEADACHE MISERY

Congested liver and lax bowels bring sick headaches. Poisonous waste matter is being re-absorbed into the blood from the congestion in the intestines. The congestion must be relieved and the system cleansed by a few doses of Pinkettes. Pinkettes act gently and thoroughly. Because they are a natural vegetable aperient, Pinkettes relieve without griping and without forming any habit. Need not laxatives. Avoid Sick Headache, migraines by an occasional dose of Pinkettes.

Stalin's Opponents.

One reason, among several,
why Stalin succeeds in beating down Opposition movements is that he has not been compelled to face a single, coherent, united Opposition. He has to deal with temporary alliances concluded between Left and Right for a special emergency and subject to all their inherent weakness. It is true that history knows many instances where such a union of opposites has been successful against a common enemy; so it cannot be argued that Stalin will continue to emerge victor. The seething mass of popular discontent in Soviet Russia may attain dimensions against which all of his subtlety and ruthlessness cannot prevail. But apparently this point has not yet been reached. Dissidents from the Left who hold with Trotsky that the peasant must be made to serve the Revolution or be crushed, and dissidents from the Right who hold with Rykoff that the peasant must not be sacrificed to the Revolution, cannot develop a fully effective and united action against the eminent political strategist in the Kremlin. The present Russian situation, the general public must appraise on the basis of information supplied by the Soviet Government itself.
It is Stalin who is authority for the statement that Gregory Zino-viev and Leo Kamenev, the two men who shared power with him
after the death of Lenin, are guilty, together with a score of minor Bolshevik leaders, of a defeatist attitude toward the entire scheme of "building socialism" in Soviet Russia. The expelled Communists are accused of advocating the abandonment of the collective and State farms.
They are further supposed to be lieve in the old system of private concessions for the great industrial plants and power sites built under the Five-Year Plan. This is the official version. But from other sources a statement of the Opposition standpoint was recently released for publication.
The attack is not so much on his aims as on his methods. In the case of the peasants he did not adopt the policy of destroying the peasants as a class, but of consolidating the peasants, but alternately he practiced terror

and retreat, with the result that he won the hatred of the peasants without reducing them to subjection. He has been strong enough to drive the peasants into the collective farms, but not strong enough to prevent the collectives from being turned into centres of effective peasant resistance. There is force in such accusations against Stalin. Yet he can turn the argument against his enemies by pointing out that he has always had against him
the extremists at both ends, and that he has always remained the prudent statesman who steers a middle course, faithful to the example set by the great master of force and flexibility, Lenin. It must be fairly simple for so old
a hand as Stalin to capitalize the differences between a Trotskyist group which would sweep the peasant aside and a Rykoffite
group which thinks the peasants' welfare basic to the welfare of Russia. In foreign policy the new Opposition accuses Stalin of having abandoned the Communist International and the world revolution. This is not a charge which is likely to hurt him with the majority of Russians—even in the Communist Party.

On The Threshold Of Discovery.

Scores of diseases are transmitted by microbes visible under a microscope. Inoculate any normal man with the proper microbe and he contracts the corresponding disease. Yet there are diseases, such as measles, smallpox, yellow fever, colds, and
the foot-and-mouth disease,
which can also be inoculated but are not apparently caused by a microbe. The blood of man suffering from yellow fever differs in no perceptible quality from normal blood. Yet it contains something deadly. Even after it has been filtered through porcelain with pores so fine that the smallest microscopically visible particle has been excluded it retains its deadliness. For want of a better name biologists speak of these invisible agents as "filterable viruses." In them biology faces an enigma. Are they alive? Heat and poisons destroy them. But analogy is no safe guide. Ferments, which are "dead" in the ordinary sense of the word, are "killed" in much the same way. On the other hand, the filterable viruses mu-tate or produce new varieties;
they adapt themselves to new conditions; they multiply. These are fundamental characteristics of life. All this is especially important because of the menace of cancer. Dr. Roux of the Pasteur Institute has injected mice with tumors and passed them through the finest filters only to find that a minute amount of the filtrate induced a tumor in a healthy fowl. What is the fatal agent?

HERE, THERE
and EVERYWHERE.

Stuffed Horses.
The French cavalry school at Saumur, which ex-King Alfonso visited is situated in one of the most picturesque regions of France.
The Loire at this point is wider than the Thames at Greenwich,
and a beautiful old stone bridge connects the town, the island in the middle of the river, and the further shore.
Don Alfonso was not allowed to leave Saumur without having visited the famous cavalry museum,
which contains the largest collection of stuffed horses ever seen,
and is admirably housed in the Castle of Saumur, a fortress in medieval times and a celebrated stronghold of the French Protestants early in the seventh century.

Your Daily Smile.

TO-DAY'S LIBEL.
And then there was the Scotsman who ordered asparagus. He left the waiter a tip.

JUST SO.

Experience may be defined as something you get when you are looking for something else.

THE BIG REASON.

"Why, Herold, your hair is ever
so much thinner than it was when I first knew you."
"I know that, my dear. But,
honestly, now, I'm sure there are other reasons."

NO CONCERN OF HIS.

A landlord wrote to one of his tenants who was a lawyer: "I regret to inform you that my rent is much overdue. Will you kindly forward me a check?"

Back went the following reply:
"I see no reason on earth why I should pay your rent. I can't even pay my own."

Facts You Did Not Know.

The city of Madrid has constructed 702 apartments and cottages capable of housing 3,500 persons to take the place of 'hubs' demolished for hygienic reasons.

Flexible posts made of rubber covered coil springs have been invented for lawn or curbstone fences to prevent injury to persons stumbling against the fences.

A German bureau that is standardizing automobile parts and accessories, has approved only nine formulas for nickel and chrome-nickel alloys after testing 180.

Resembling a road scraper, a tractor drawn machine has been invented to cut terraces in hillsides to check the flow of water and prevent soil loss by erosion.

News in Brief.

A clean bill of health was returned in the Colony on Wednesday.

At the local Y's Men's Club
Tiffin, yesterday Rev. E. L. Allen spoke on "Idols of the Cave."
There were nearly 40 members and guests present.

A claim by Lam Shin Cho, c/o
Prince's Cafe, Queen's Road, against
Mr. E. D. Shank, of 89, Humphrey's Building, Kowloon, for $1,000 deposited with him in respect of his employment by defendant as shroff,
which employment had since ceased,
was upheld by the Pui-sue Judge
(Mr. Justice Wood) at the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon.

Whence does it come? It is evident that biology stands upon the threshold of a discovery as great as any made by Pasteur or Koch. The filterable viruses may prove to have an importance greater than we suppose. The work of Roux suggests that we are in the presence of phenomena that lie at the root of life.
Death and life—we distinguish between the two in the higher forms as if there were two categories. Yet, in the last analysis, all matter is composed of atoms.
Somewhere between the simple
"dead" atoms of hydrogen and the most primitive living cell activity appears that we call life. Between the two there must be something that is neither dead nor alive. This, we perhaps caught a glimpse of it in these filterable viruses.

Himalayan Peak

LED BY GENERAL BRUCE

By Brig.-Gen. The Hon. C. G. Bruce.

On my return from the Conway Expedition to the Karakoram Himalayas, in 1892, I found that I was detailed as Special Service Officer in the Gilgit district.

On my arrival there, after a most sporting and rather adventurous incident down the Chilas Valley—
hardly far removed from buccan-ing, which resulted in the pacification of the Indus Valley as far down as Chilas itself—I was transferred to Gilgit and attached to Sir George Robertson's Mission to Chitral.

The month was January, 1893—
New Year's Day. A few days later the Mission found itself at the small fort of Gupis, two marches to the west. This garrison was commanded by Capt. Townshend (the late Sir Charles Townshend), who,
two years later, was to go through the siege of Chitral.

The night of my arrival there is a landmark in the history of my life. I was summoned after dinner to the camp fire, where I found Sir George Robertson, and for the first time in my life met Francis Younghusband, who was second in command of the Mission. They then put a proposition to me.

It was whether I would take part in a project they had formed, which was no less than to descend through Tibet from the north, and had for its objective the exploration, or, at any rate let us say, the observation of the Everest group. I really do believe that for a moment a vision of the possibility of climbing the mountain came over them, as that great hill-
man and dare-devil, the late Col.
Jack Manners-Smith, was also to be included in the party.

It was a weird scheme, I will allow, but that, however, is beside the point.

Dream of Conquest.

The idea of the exploration of Everest took form in the brain of one of the most determined of all explorers—the present Sir Francis Younghusband.

That was 40 years ago, and it is very wonderful to think that I still receive summonses to meet him at the Geographical Society, to further the great project which we have both had in mind for such a great number of years—the assault and final defeat of the highest summit of the world.

In the winter of the year 1906,
almost a chance meeting occurred in the Alpine Club rooms. There a little committee of three was formed, consisting of the late Mr. Arnold of the Senate's Committee on Foreign relations, said to-day that Mex-

Clipperton Islands to France. The Islands, whose disposition was referred to the Italian monarch for arbitration, are a thousand miles south west of the coast of Mexico.

COALITION SOLVES GERMAN PROBLEM

ELECTION TIGHTENED PARTIES' DEADLOCK

VON PAPEN STRONGER

Berlin, Nov. 10.

Coalition is Germany's only method to win back to political stability and alter the impossible effects of a minority's attempt to govern. She has chosen between coalition and complete dictatorship. She has set her course and her statesmen are preparing for their voyage.

A review of the whole situation, following the elections, is enlightening.

The keenly awaited results have not brought the just as keenly hoped-for solution of the deadlock. With the decrease of the poll of the National Socialists, Social Democrats, the Clerical Centre and the Bavarian People's Party, and the increase, on the other hand, of that of the National People's Party, its ally, the German People's Party, and the Communists, the powers in the Reichstag are considerably shifted.

Chancellor's Gain.

Aside from the undoubted success of the Communists and the fact that the two Marxist parties again exceed the National Socialists, the outstanding feature of the elections is the success of the parties backing Chancellor von Papen, inasmuch as the potential majority coalition of the National Socialists, Clerical Centre, and the Bavarian People's Party has now been reduced to a minority. With any attempt to form a coalition including parties of the Right, the two von Papen parties will in any case hold the key position. The decrease of the National Socialist (Nazis) poll is also regarded as favourable for the Chancellor because it emphasises his contention that the National Socialists were not justified in demanding the power of Government all for themselves as they did at the now historic meeting between Herr Hitler and President von Hindenburg on August 13.

Communists Win.

Berlin was practically the only large election district where voting was heavier than on July 31. Here the poll was as follows: Communists, 861,000; National Socialists, 720,000; Social Democrats, 640,000.

All the other parties got less than 500,000 each, headed by the National People's Party with 314,000.

One of the strange features of the election, which may be regarded as significant, though in itself not important, was the poll at Coburg, the capital of Saxony, where the National Socialists regarded as one of their strongholds. There the National Socialists lost as much as one third of their former poll.—Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

Italy, Hungary Settle Accounts

Conventions Agreed
Upon In Controversies.

Rome.—Italy and Hungary today settled accounts emanating from the World War through a series of three conventions agreed upon by Premier Mussolini and Premier Goemboes of Hungary.

It was announced that Premier Goemboes returned to Budapest last night after spending three days here in conferences regarding the conventions covering the debts and credits.

The conventions placed into effect agreements on debts and credits reached in 1924 and 1927 and settled all pending questions regarding the Italian occupation of Fiume, Adriatic port city, by a force under Gabriel D'Annunzio after the end of the war.

A commission was created to foster trade relations between Italy and Hungary.

SARO SURRENDERS TO MADRID POLICE.

Count Playa Of Ixdain Must Stand Trial.

HONOURABLE CONDUCT

Madrid, Spain, Nov. 12. General Leopoldo Saro, the Count Playa of Ixdain, was visited in his military prison to-day by the responsibilities committee, headed by Cordero Bujeda.

The committee heard Saro's declaration, whereafter it announced that the trial of the general would probably not be held before the end of December. Royo Villanova, one of the members of the committee, said he received a letter from Saro in September, expressing his intention to surrender to the committee, but saying hitherto he was prevented by illness.

The committee had full knowledge of Saro's movements at all times. Bujeda told the United Press that the committee was greatly impressed with the loyalty and gentlemanly conduct of Saro, who surrendered when he might have remained in the Philippines, earning ten times more than his former military salary in Spain.

Saro preferred to respect the Cortes' decision and agreed to give an account of his conduct in connection with the coup d'etat in 1923 when Premier Primo de Rivera took the helm.

Saro returned only a few days ago from the Philippines. He was arrested at Barcelona and brought to Madrid to face trial.—U.P.

REVENUE TAX TO BE REVISED.

Official Hurries To Canton Parley.

The revision of revenue taxes is the reason for the visit of Mr. Shiu Chung-kam, Superintendent of Customs at Chai-Mei, to Canton.

Mr. Shiu, who arrived here from Swatow, yesterday, said he had been urgently requested to discuss the revision with Mr. Lam Chung-yick, Commissioner of Civil Affairs in Canton, and he proposed to return to Swatow after a three days stay in Canton.

Democrat Victory May Hinder Filipinos' Freedom

Washington, Yesterday.

While election of a Democratic House and Senate on the face of things was being interpreted as favourable to Filipino independence aspirations, some observers to-day believed the outcome of the elections might work to hinder action on independence at the forthcoming short sessions of Congress.

The old 72nd Congress will meet in December, and remain in the Capitol until March 3, 1933.

Since the short session of the 72nd Congress will be full of so many "house" bills, the prospects are not bright that action on independence will come up until the 73rd session of Congress meets.

THE SEVENTH SNAKE

By W.
Gillespy.

RAM CHAND'S craven heart sank when the man whom he had betrayed to the police entered his shop and gazed at him with savage intensity. He tried to meet the Pathan's eyes, but Sher Khan read the terror in his shifting glance. The knowledge that he could play on his enemy's fears as a musician sets the strings of his instrument vibrating filled him with cruel glee.

"I will let him live till evening," he decided. "His liver will turn to water as he watcheth the death he cannot escape draw nearer each moment. Oh! Oh! Slow suspense shall melt the marrow in his bones ere my thirsty blade reacheth his black heart."

Very slowly he drew his knife and felt the razor-keen edge while his revengeful eyes bored into the Hindu's soul.

"I seek my foe," he said slowly. "The traitor who sent me to stew in that hell which men call prison. Throughout Sind I have sought him, through the Punjab and Bahawalpur; over burning desert tracks and from village to village, in these hills. I seek—my foe. Who betrayed me?"

"Mohun Lal betrayed thee." The trembling whisper pleased the Pathan and he pretended to believe the lie.

"Why?" he asked. "He sought favour with the police; such as he have neither honour nor courage, and he fled to Lahore lest thou shouldst find and slay him."

A customer entered the shop while Ram Chand served him. Sher Khan squatted on the floor and did some hard thinking. A Pathan of the turbulent Gilzai tribe, he would have scored to have any dealings with the other, except when he used him as a fence.

MR. DAVIS TALKS TO ITALY'S DICTATOR.

Looked At As Mediator
On Disarmament.

Rome, Nov. 14.

Mr. Norman Davis, the American delegate to the Disarmament Conference, has had a series of conversations with Premier Mussolini. These parleys are being followed with a good deal of attention by diplomatic and political circles, inasmuch as Mr. Davis only recently had lengthy meetings with the British Prime Minister, Mr. MacDonald, and French Premier, M. Herriot, and is believed to act, though unofficially, as a mediator in an attempt to bring about an understanding amongst the leading powers on the disarmament problem.—Transocean Kuomin.

Regarding the naval proposals which include cruiser size reduction and abolition of submarines, further conversations are now proceeding at Geneva between representatives of the chief naval powers.

Sir John Simon emphasised in his speech that immense armament reductions made in recent years by British preclude her from going further without a general agreement. British proposals are primarily directed to finding a basis whereon Germany's claim to equality of status could be dealt with while bearing in mind that the object of the conference was to effect the maximum measures of disarmament.

Four Stages.

Sir John Simon suggested, under four heads, the best means of achieving equality: firstly, all European countries should join in an agreement not to attempt in any circumstances to solve any difficulties by resort to force; secondly, limitation of Germany's armaments should be contained in the same disarmament convention as that which will define the limitation of armaments of other countries; thirdly, German limitations would last for the same period as the limitation imposed on the armaments of other countries; fourthly, Germany should have the legal right to possess armaments permitted other countries on the condition that there is no rearmament.

In practice, full realisation of the principle of equality cannot be achieved all at once and therefore the British Government has put forward its conception of a practicable programme of stages.

With reference to the proposed undertaking by European powers not to resort to force to settle difficulties, Sir John Simon remarked: "The barrier to further disarmament in Europe is fear; and Europe is entitled to ask that this fear should be assuaged by the most positive and precise declaration, not from one state alone but from all the states of Europe, in reference to all matters of controversy with their neighbours. We wholly repudiate the view that such assurance solemnly given in these circumstances would be a worthless promise. The condemnation of the whole world would follow if it were disregarded." — British Wireless Service.

Sunday's elections. The President furthermore informed the Chancellor that in accordance with the idea of "national concentration" which had prompted him to entrust Herr von Papen with the task of forming a Government, he should at once consult the party leaders in question to ascertain whether they were willing to support the present government in carrying out its political and economic reform programme.

As a result of these instructions the Chancellor will lose no time in getting into touch with the leaders of the National Socialist, the German National People's and the Clerical Centre Parties, though in view of Herr Hitler's recent strongly worded anti-government pronouncements it is considered rather doubtful whether the chief of the National Socialists will consent to any such negotiation with Chancellor von Papen. In these circumstances the chances for a practicable arrangement taking shape before the opening of the first session of the new Reichstag, which according to the constitution must be held within thirty days after the elections, are thought to be rather remote so that the present government is expected to remain in office for a considerable time on the basis of the President's confidence instead of on that of a majority in the Reichstag. This is all the more probable as the Reich President is evidently not in favour of a coalition Cabinet of the old kind in which the parties would be represented according to their strength in Parliament, but is clinging to the idea of having a Cabinet in which the majority of the Ministers are without strong party affiliations.—Trans-Ocean.

Alleged to have been assaulted by a Sanitary Department coolie, Hu Mal Ping, 23, a Collyer of 17, Chung Ching Street, was sent to the Government Civil Hospital on Wednesday night.

BRILLIANT COTTON

THE RUTHLESS
GOLFER.Perry Swamped In The
£1,040 Final.

BRILLIANT PUTTING.

Eighteen holes in 65 strokes—eleven under bogey—and six up! So did Henry Cotton, the young Langley Park golfer, "burn up" the Moor Park course in the final of the "News of the World" £1,040 tournament against Alfred Perry, of Leatherhead, who played remarkably steady golf, but was swamped by a wizard of the links.

"Superlative, magnificent, amazing" were a few of the exclamations I heard applied to the golf of Cotton, which must have been the finest ever seen in this competition. Perry, three strokes under bogey at the turn, found himself three down.

The icy concentration of Cotton gave the impression that he felt entirely alone amid that vast gallery. Tumultuous applause affected him not at all. His granite-like young face never moved a muscle. He did not speak a word, but softly caressed his putter before making his undeviating way to the hole.

ON THE DOTTED LINE.

It was as if, before he started out, he had mapped out a pattern—and he never strayed an inch from the dotted line. Perry was never allowed to reap the advantage of a good drive, for Cotton, with savage relentlessness, always put his approach inside that of his opponent.

Perry's long putts, with which he had been making history in this championship, scuttled away like startled rabbits.

At the twelfth, for instance, he had by far the better drive—with three yards of the hole while Cotton had a difficult uphill putt. Perry should have retrieved a hole here, but he putted weakly, and merely collected a half.

WHIRLWIND BRILLIANCE.

The tenth hole obviously rattled Perry. He sliced into a bunker but made a fine recovery inside Cotton's drive, but Cotton, with superb confidence, sent the ball into the tin for a two. Cotton ended his whirlwind round of brilliance with two threes. He holed a 12-yard putt for a three at the 17th. He showed no quarter to his crushed opponent at the 18th. Perry might reasonably have expected to win this hole. He was within five feet of the pin with his drive, but Cotton played an eight-yard putt on to the run and dashed Perry's confidence so that he missed his own short putt.

The figures of Cotton's amazing round were:

Out: 4 4 3 3 4 4 3 4 5 — 38

In: 2 4 3 5 4 4 4 3 3 — 32

It was accomplished on a course sodden and slowed down by many hours of rain. It seemed unfair that a man who played as well as Perry did should be travelling so far behind.

As Cotton was about to drive from the sixth tee some men with poles walked across the fairway. "Hi!" roared "Sandy" Herd in a stentorian voice. "Keep away!"

Both caddies were standing in Cotton's line on the green, and he said "Move away, boys, please" before holing out.

KENT BEAT
SUFFOLK BY
ODD GOALTwo Ladies' Hockey
Matches.

MEDWAY BEAT JATS.

At King's Park, in an inter-ship hockey match, H.M.S. Kent defeated H.M.S. Suffolk by the odd goal in seven. Knott, Drew and Short (2) netted for the winners, while Pearce (2) and Walker replied for the Suffolk.

MEDWAY WIN.

No less than eleven goals were registered on the Marina ground, where H.M.S. Medway defeated the Jats by 6 goals to 5 in a fast friendly encounter. The Jats led by 4 goals to one at half-time, but cracked up badly in the second half, during which period the Medway found the net five times.

RECREIO WIN.

On the D.G.S. ground yesterday the Recreio Ladies beat the "Y" Ladies by 3 goals to 1.

SAINTS LADIES LOSE.

In a scrappy match on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon, a team from H.M.S. Suffolk defeated the St. Andrew's Club Ladies by 5 goals to nil, after leading by three goals at the interval.

Phillips (2), Mottram, Law and Evans netted for the Suffolk, who proved too superior for the Ladies. M. Woolley, at centre-forward for the Saints, fed her wings with well directed passes, but on the whole she lacked support.

BROWN SCORES TWO.

At King's Park yesterday the Y.M.C.A. second eleven performed a creditable performance when they held the H.K.S.R.A. second string to a draw of three goals all.

At half-time the Indians, who were captained by Lt. Prior, led by two goals to one and soon went further ahead on the resumption. Baldwin and W. J. Brown, however, scored good goals for the "Y" to place them on level terms after the home side had enjoyed the best of the exchanges during the latter half.

Baldwin's goal was the best of the match. It was a first-time shot from the edge of the circle. Brown also scored in the first half.

Had the "Y" defence been stronger, they would undoubtedly have won. Owen was the most prominent player for the "Y".

THREE AMERICANS IN LAST
FOUR IN N.S.W.Vines To Meet Allison For The Championship.

Sydney, Yesterday. Americans are again dominant in the lawn tennis world. After carrying all before them at Wimbledon they have invaded Australia and have succeeded in making the New South Wales Singles Championship an all-American final. The following were the results of the semi-final games: Wilbur Allison (U.S.A.) beat Jack Crawford (Australia) 7-5, 4-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3. Ellsworth Vines (U.S.A.) beat John Van Ryn (U.S.A.) 6-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-0.—Reuter.

AMERICANS WIN
IN N.S.W.Seven Matches To Four.

Sydney, Nov. 12. With two American victories against one for New South Wales, the three-day tennis contest between the visiting American champions and New South Wales came to a close to-day, the last match having to remain unfinished, owing to falling light.

In the first match to-day, Vivian McGrath, the home player, beat Wilbur Allison by 4-6, 7-5, and 6-3. Ellsworth Vines, the American champion, avenged the defeat of his compatriot in the next match, when he beat Jack Crawford by 2-6, 6-3 and 6-4.

In a doubles match, Allison and John Van Ryn (U.S.A.) disposed of McGrath and Willard (N.S.W.) by 5-7, 6-4, 6-3 and 6-4. The second doubles contest, in which Vines and Keith Gledhill opposed Crawford and G. Dunlop, was abandoned owing to bad light, at a time when it promised to be a close fight. The score then was nine-all.

Altogether, the Americans won seven matches to four for New South Wales, thus winning the contest.

K.B.G.C. BRIDGE WIN.

A very enjoyable evening was spent by members of the Kowloon Cricket Club and the Kowloon Bowling Green Club on Wednesday evening. This is the first occasion on which these clubs have met in an auction bridge match, and the result was a win for the bowlers by 1,888 points.

INTERPORT
TEAM TO BE
TESTEDStrong Chinese Eleven
At Caroline Hill.

SOUTH CHINA v SAINTS.

To-morrow's game between the Interport eleven and the combined Chinese eleven will be of special interest to football enthusiasts in the Colony.

This will be the first time since the trial series commenced that the Interport team will be playing together, and this should give them the hardest test, for the Combined Chinese team will be one of considerable strength, having amongst its players, men of wide football experience outside that of Colony standard.

The Chinese team should provide the most formidable opposition to date and should on my forecast beat the Interport team by two clear goals.

Both teams will have a hard time of things, and the game will prove whether or not the selectors have made a good choice or not.

The following are the teams:

Interport XI: Rodger; Strange, Mullane; Bliss, Pardoe, Duncan; Cheng Shiu-hong, Wong Mei-shun, Howe, Suen Kam-shun and Baldry. Chinese XI: from the following: Lam Yuk-ying, Ho Chai-yin, Lai Kwok-chiu, Wong Sui-wah, Ho Kuen, Mak So, Chan Kwong-yu, Tang Kwong-sun, Lam Tin-chun, Lee Tin-sang, Ip Pak-wah, Fung King-cheung, Tam Kong-pak, Tong Kwan, Leung Yu-chun, Leung Dak-wing, Lee Kwok-wai, Kam Pak-shiu, and Lee Shek-yau.

HOW SARAZEN PUTTS

"ROLLING" THE BALL
INTO THE HOLE

(By Charles Whitcombe.)

WHEN I was at Sandwich for the Open Championship, I overheard a spectator remark: "If I could drive as far as Arthur Havers I'd back myself to go round in 72 once in three times. A bang from the tee, a flick with a masher to the green, and two putts. There you are; it's easy."

I agree that length is an enormously important factor in modern golf, but the significant fact is that everyone seemed to be agreed that Gene Sarazen won the title mainly by his superb putting.

"It's aye the puttin'." The venerable Scotsman who coined the phrase knew well his golf, and it is as true to-day as ever it was. I had not the opportunity, unfortunately, to see much of Sarazen's play at Sandwich, but, of course, I know his style, which is notable for its soundness. Watch him, and immediately the thought occurs, "Here is a golfer who has studied the game intently, and who by great perseverance and care has become so steady and constant in his swing that the shots are not likely to go wrong."

Sarazen proved this. To play six rounds in an average of 4's without a 6, over the longest championship course in the world, was truly a marvellous record.

Body Behind the Ball.

Yet, while he covered the distance from tee to green with splendid accuracy, it was, as I have stated, mainly his putting which took him to victory. Let me explain how Sarazen putts. Like most American golfers, he has his body behind the ball, the toe of the left foot being almost opposite the ball. This is the first thing to be noted. The second is his steadiness. There is no perceptible movement of the body, and this is a characteristic of all first-class putters. You cannot put well and move the body. There is, however, no suggestion of rigidity about his stance. He stands perfectly easy and free, and obviously with a light grip of the club.

But while all these are important matters, perhaps the most vital thing of all is the way in which he swings the club and strikes the ball. As in the case of Bobby Jones, he definitely swings, taking the club well back even for the short putts. For the approach putt, the club head goes back a foot or more. It is noticeable too, that he follows through well. In this way he keeps the movement of the club smooth and free.

Again Sarazen is one of those putters who roll the ball. This aspect of his putting was discussed at Sandwich, and an amateur competitor in the event declared that there were not half a dozen British professionals who did not definitely hit the ball on the green. I am not prepared to say whether this is correct or not, but I agree that it is comparatively rare to see a player in this country rolling his putts.

The suggestion about the "rolling" ball is that it has been struck on an upward glancing blow. That is to say, it has been gently stroked in the centre at a time when the club head has arrived at the extreme bottom of the curve of the swing and is just starting to ascend. But this it is not borne out in the case of Sarazen. His club does not come up after the ball has been struck. Indeed, it is specially noticeable that after the ball has started on its way towards the hole the club head goes on parallel to the ground, almost touching the top of the grass.

Interlock Grip.

I am inclined to think that the roll of the ball is mainly due to the smoothness with which it is struck. The club is taken back slowly, and there is, in fact, little or no acceleration as it returns. Obviously, too, the follow-through helps in prompting this smoothness. Truly Sarazen is a beautiful putter. I am told that the way in which he judged the strength of the approach putt was remarkable. I would not attempt to minimise in the slightest the credit for this splendid achievement, but, as every golfer knows, holding out or playing the approach when the game is running with you, and I can imagine that there are occasions when the little American does not appear so certain on the greens as he was during his memorable week at Sandwich.

Sarazen is one of that school of golfers, to which I and my brothers also belong, who inter-lock in the grip. He, as in my case, tried to change to the over-lapping style. George Duncan persuaded me to make the experiment, and I believe he was responsible for Sarazen departing from the method of holding the club as he had learnt to do as a boy. But both of us had a most unfortunate experience. With the over-lapping grip I sliced outrageously, and the same complaint seized Sarazen. In fact, the alteration in his style put him completely off his game, and though he went back to his old manner of holding the club, it took him over a year to regain his proper form. Much the same thing happened in my case.

I do not think there is anything more dangerous than to change a grip that one has become accustomed to, and in the circumstances, it behoves every player to see that his hands are correctly placed when he first takes up the game.

VILLA SHOULD TRIUMPH AND BRENTFORD RETAIN DISTINCTION

HIGHBURY SIDE TO BE TESTED

VILLA'S TWO AIMS.

Brentford Should Hold Cardiff City.

COMPLETE STATISTICS.

ASTON VILLA are experiencing a difficult fortnight. Last Saturday they visited the champions at Goodison Park, and fulfilled expectations by dividing the spoils. To-morrow they are at home to the Arsenal, present leaders. It is going to be a grand match with the odds slightly in favour of the Villa Park players. They have the great opportunity of climbing back to their position at the head of the table, and they have also a 100 per cent. home record to defend.

The Highbury team have a better away record than their home record of 5 wins and a draw out of 7 matches. Birmingham, Manchester City, Blackpool, Blackburn Rovers, Liverpool and the Wolves have all conceded major points to Herbert Chapman's team, while the Throstles have held them to a draw.

Brentford, another London team, are also featured in an interesting game. They visit Cardiff City with an unbeaten record in fourteen matches, will they maintain the form which has kept them unbeaten a fortnight longer than any other side in the five leagues?

Last week Cardiff visited Torquay and lost by 4 goals to 1 after a home defeat by Exeter City on the previous Saturday. Queen's Park Rangers and Newport have collected both points when visiting Cardiff, so that it would not be too much to expect of Brentford that they should at least draw if they do not force a win.

In order to facilitate the efforts of readers to forecast this week's winners, last week's results, together with Ranger's Forecast and Home and Away League Tables to date, are published below.

Now two emotions fought for mastery in the bunnia's soul—greed for the gold which the Pathan helped him to hoard and fear of death. Sher Khan kept the fear alive, gloating over his foe's terror, bringing gladness to his heart one day, uttering veiled threats the next. Asking particulars of Mohun Lal's activities and his associates in Lahore, that he might the more easily find him there, then expressing his firm conviction that Mohun Lal was innocent of treachery.

Ram Chand, belonging to one of the most timid of all the Indian castes, was ready to flee and leave his wealth behind him if he could escape in no other way. He dared not even attempt flight.

"No, no, no," he whispered to the silent night as he lay awake. "I dare not. It would be folly. He would then be sure of my guilt and follow me to the ends of the earth, that tiger. Would that the gods had shrivelled my tongue ere it uttered his name to the police."

Still he alternated between terror and hope; still the Pathan's ingenuity in torturing him grew with practice; still the blow did not fall. Sher Khan had his own reasons for waiting. One was the wealth which the bunnia was garnering; why not let him garner more before he killed him and took all? A dozen thieves brought their loot to the bunnia, who sold it at a much higher price than Sher Khan knew how to obtain.

Another reason was a growing distaste for the actual killing. He would have fought against long odds cheerfully, killing a man who was a man with gusto or meeting death boldly if vanquished. Now he a most loathed the idea of slaying this pitiful thing with his own hands and hated the bunnia the more for this strange hesitation. Then a chance brought an opportunity which filled him with glee.

"Give me money," he said to Ram Chand. "A gang of wandering outcasts have come from Ind and have a roll of silk they fear to carry further. They ask seventy rupees; give me forty and I will buy it."

He returned to the nomads' camp outside the village and was about to sit on a strong basket when the headman uttered a quick warning. "Pardon, O Pathan, pardon. In that basket is the hooded death and thy great weight might break it."

"Cobras? Wah! How many? Why keep ye such evil beasts?" "There are seven; we sell to those who make the fight with snake and mongoose in the bazaars for money."

The head man waited patiently while the Pathan brooded; the e was eager purpose in his tones when he spoke.

"I will buy your seven snakes," he said, and carried away the basket, and the silk. The bunnia had never seen him in such merry mood as he went to the cellar. He spread the silk over a box so that it gleamed in the lantern light; then he went up and cautiously removed the basket lid, quickly inverting it over the opening. He heard the snakes hiss as they fell on the step ladder, and laid aside the basket.

"Ye will soon have company," he chuckled, and went to the shop.

"Ah, bunnia," he beamed. "Such silk! Like the moonlight on a lake. Such silk as the hours in Paradise wear. Such silk as—see it and let its beauty gladden thy heart. Close the shop quickly, my friend; a surprise awaiteth thee."

Later the receiver went to inspect the silk. As he hung his lantern on a wall the Pathan quietly closed the trap-door and peered through a chink. Ram Chand held the silk so that the light rippled over its rich folds, dropped it with a cry of fear, and hurried up the steps.

"Something bit me, surely it must be a snake," he panted in his fear. Why hast thou shut the door? Open quickly—I see more snakes."

"Nay, brother; perhaps a thorn among the straw pricked thee."

"A snake. I see them—there are many. Open quickly."

"How many snakes? I see only the one on the ladder."

The bunnia looked down, and saw no snake on the ladder. There was one at the foot of it and there was a sinuous motion among the straw; baleful points of light in a dark corner.

"Wait, oh my friend! Let me look at the snake on the ladder," the Pathan jeered in answer to the bunnia's hoarse pleading. "Ah, it is a very evil snake and its name is Ram Chand. It is the snake which betrayed me to the police; a venomous snake and very treacherous."

"Let me out—let me out. I did not betray thee. By the gods I swear it."

"Then swear by them all one by one. Nay, my brother, there are many gods whom ye Hindus worship. Swear by each one, and I will believe thee." He kept the doomed wretch swearing till his voice was little more than a croak.

"Good. Forgive me for doubting of her guns, boilers, torpedoes, and armour plating have been removed. The old cruiser Terrible, which landed guns in the South African War for the defence of Ladysmith, has left Portsmouth for Newport to be broken up."

The vessel was lately known as Figard Third, and was the last of the hulks used as a training school for boy artificers, now transferred to Chatham.

Originally condemned under the London Naval Treaty to be scrapped with the Emperor of India, Marlborough, Benbow, and Tiger, the Iron Duke was reprieved, and ordered instead to be fitted for use as a gunnery practice vessel. Most of her guns, boilers, torpedoes, and armour plating have been removed.

"Even on the threshold of death thou liest. Those diamonds were sold ere the month of the Ramzan fast, I will take gold. Where is it?"

"In the safe. Oh, let me out."

"With the flames of hell already licking thy feet the lies drip from thy tongue as do raindrops from the trees. There is little in the safe."

"Know I not of the iron box under the hearthstone? Have I tormented thee, watched fear turn thy false heart to water, gloated over the agony of thy shrunken soul, seen all the horrors of hell in thy haunted eyes—have I watched thee hour by hour without preparing for this moment? Have I noted the shackles of despair which chained thy feet in the path of death, which held thee even from flight and paralysed thy will, have I followed thine every movement without knowing where thy wealth was hidden?"

"The fastest horse ever foaled could not carry thee to where a cure could be found—in time. It is well. I know the false bottom in the sugar cask; I know what lies under the stone slab beneath the flour bin. I have left nothing worth taking in the cellar—look and see. I know what is hidden in a bar of soap; there are rubies at the bottom of the teacup cask. Can none but cowards be clever? Can only cravens be wise? Fool, witless, gibbering fool!"

"Thou hast garnered well, O snake, among snakes. Thou hast garnered well—for me. Let that thought console thee in hell. Thou hast—"

Footsteps were passing the shop and the Pathan waited. When all was silent again he looked through the chink; the receiver lay face downwards among the straw, and there was no answer to his gibes.

As he raised himself something softened under his hand; it hissed and struck at his throat.

"That bunnia snake truth when he said there were but six snakes," he said slowly and stupidly, as ordered at Yokohama on Nov. 17 by the suddenness with which his doom had fallen. "I made him six, and he due at count seven. I made him six."

The night echoed to his mangled p.m. She will leave Hong Kong (for Manila) on the same day at midnight.

AIR DISASTER—Captain James B. Dickson (right), the pilot, was killed, and Mr. Arthur M. Loew (left), vice-president and head of the international department of M-G-M, was injured, when their aeroplane, the Spirit of Fun, crashed at Victoria Falls yesterday. They are seen with the plane in this picture. They recently visited Hong Kong on a trip around the world in the interests of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer enterprises.

said that they had returned to London with a will to succeed. They were determined to draw up a constitution that would really work and at the same time satisfy the legitimate aspirations of the Indian people.
Sir Samuel Hoare said that the object of the agenda was to cover the questions not yet sufficiently discussed and to avoid repetition of discussions already held. He thought that they should try to finish the conference by about December 20, because if they were to get ahead with the joint select committee the next session of the Government must have adequate time to consider its proposals. The Conference meets again on Monday.—British Wireless Service.

HUGE SHIPMENT OF OPIUM FOUND.

Marseilles, Nov. 12.
A huge quantity of opium was confiscated here aboard the steamer "Lionatin" upon her arrival from Eastern ports. The seizure is said to be one of the largest of its kind ever made by the Marseilles police, who acted upon information received from a drug dealer who had had a violent quarrel with a member of the ring to which the opium was consigned.—Transocean Kuomin.
